Congratulations on starting the journey, to finish your diploma.

While you may have heard people refer to their diploma by different names -- such as the GED - the high school equivalency diploma is basically a certification that says you've finished your high school education.

The first step is to find adult education classes near you.

All you need to do is go to www.finishyourdiploma.org and enter your zip code to locate an adult learning center near you.

Most of the centers that you'll find offer FREE classes that cover the material you're going to be tested on when you take your High School Equivalency exam.

There are over 10,000 centers in the US that can help you earn your high school equivalency diploma.

Whether you need a center that's near your house, near your job, or even near your family's house so you can drop your kids off before class, you will be able to choose the center that is most convenient for you.

So what are you waiting for?

Step two, maybe?
